Cops to ticket for small weed busts

NYC. The police will issue summonses instead of making arrests for small amounts of weed, in policy shift.

Police Commissioner Bill Bratton and Mayor Bill de Blasio said Monday the NYPD will stop arresting most people in New York found with less than 25 grams of marijuana.

Historically, the department has arrested those who possessed small amounts of marijuana on misdemeanor charges of criminal possession of marijuana (fifth degree). When the new policy goes into effect on Nov. 19, those found with less than 25 grams will receive a summons to appear in court for the lesser violation of unlawful possession of marijuana, and have their drugs seized.

At a Monday afternoon press conference, both Bratton and de Blasio made it clear they do not support the legalization of marijuana. Bratton said issuing summons frees up his officers to pursue higher-level drug offenses.

"This is the policy of the New York City Police Department," Bratton said. "I have made a decision based on extensive discussion with my leadership team that this is beneficial to the department, beneficial, I think, to some citizens of this city who would be arrested."

De Blasio said the new policy will "help reduce unnecessary arrest for minor marijuana possession," which often has "disastrous consequences" in terms of finding housing and employment and securing student loans, especially in black and Latino communities.

"I came into office with a pledge to incessantly work to heal some of the wounds of the past, and create a strong bond, an even stronger bond, between the police and community," de Blasio said.

There are exceptions. Individuals found with 25 grams of marijuana or less — valued at $300 on the streets — but who hold a warrant, do not have identification, are committing another offense or who are wanted for questioning, will be arrested. Bratton said anyone found smoking marijuana will continue to be arrested.

Those who receive a summons will still have to appear in court, usually several weeks after the incident, and are subject to a $100 fine on the first offense; $250 on the second within three years.

Bratton said marijuana arrests are down 3 percent this year, with 24,828 arrests in 2013, and 24,081 as of Nov. 9. Marijuana phone call complaints are up 30 percent, and Bratton said the "vast majority" of the calls placed to 911 and 311 are coming from the city's "poor" and "minority" neighborhoods.

In July, Brooklyn District Attorney Ken Thompson announced he would stop prosecuting marijuana misdemeanors for first-time offenders.

Waiting outside of police headquarters were about eight members of Drug Policy Alliance. Kassandra Frederique, a policy manager, said minorities are going to continue to be targeted for marijuana offenses, and will continue to receive summonses, if they are not arrested.

"These same communities ... need resources, and targeted law enforcement, stop and frisks and unlawful marijuana arrests are not going to help," Frederique said.

Smoke while you got them

The new law will go into effect on Nov. 19.

- People who are stopped by the police with less than 25 grams will be ticketed for the lesser violation of unlawful possession of marijuana, and have their drugs seized.
- Outside One Police Headquarters, several members of Occupy Weed Street smoked marijuana from a one-hitter and said that the new rule didn't go far enough.
- Harrison Tesoura Schultz, an OWS member, said, "Our demands are no more stops, no more fines, no more tickets, no more arrests, no more summons for distribution, possession or cultivation of cannabis."

Brawl erupts on F train, four arrested

A melee broke out on a F train at 5 a.m. Saturday after a man slapped a woman who was taunting him.

In a video of the event, a young woman ridicules a fellow passenger. When the man gets fed up, the woman attempts to hit him and he slaps her. The encounter turned into a brawl, with fellow passengers getting involved.

As the video went viral Monday, the NYPD arrested four in connection with the fight.

Jorge Pena, 25 and Kevin Gil, 21, were charged with misdemeanor assault and disorderly conduct; Danay Howard, 21, was charged with felony assault; and Shanique Campbell, 20, was charged with misdemeanor assault and disorderly conduct.

NYC. City booms with self-employed: Study

New York is bursting with freelancers.

A new study released on Monday by the Center for an Urban Future reveals that New York City is home to 250,000 self-employed workers, a segment of the workforce that's increased by 31 percent since 2000.

"Part of what we're seeing is probably out of necessity as big companies cut back and lay people off," said Jonathan Bowles, executive director at the Center for an Urban Future. "There aren't a lot of great jobs out there, but also part of it is that technology is really giving people a platform to go out and work on their own."

According to the report, the Bronx has had the largest percentage increase in self-employment since 2000 while Brooklyn is the most popular home for freelancers, housing 72,503 self-employed workers.

Easier than ever

Lydia Dishman, a freelance business journalist and regular contributor to Fast Company, said that she believes part of the reason there are more self-employed New Yorkers is that it's easier than ever to work remotely thanks to Wi-Fi, and technologies such as Skype and web-based conference software and collaboration tools.

Model dies after riding on top of a MTA train

Brian McClellen died on Monday morning from severe burns. / FACEBOOK

Greenwich. The 21-year-old was severely burned after hopping on a train.

An aspiring model and actor died on Monday in the wake of a reported daredevil stunt gone wrong.

Early on Sunday morning, 21-year-old Brian McClellen was electrocuted and severely burned after he jumped on top of a Metro-North train that was heading from Connecticut to New York City, according to reports. He was reportedly struck by a mechanized arm atop the train that was pulsing with 12,500 volts of electricity.

As the train pulled into Connecticut's Riverside Station at 5 a.m., a MTA crew member discovered McClellen still atop the train and doused him with a fire extinguisher. He reportedly suffered burns to 85 percent of his body.

McClellen was transported to Westchester Medical Center, where he died 24 hours after the incident. Police are reviewing video of the events. METRO

You were living in Saint Croix when the idea for your company came to you, prompting you to move to New York.
Yes. I was raised in New York City, but I was recruited by a four-star hotel in Saint Croix and I was living what some people would call an idyllic life. I worked as a manager on 350 acres of beach-front property and had an apartment right on the beach. But once you've had an accomplished career, at some point you want more.

What did you do?
Well, I thought about my life and my background and got really excited thinking about [launching] a company. My company is called Krieger Creative Group and it's multi-faceted and multi-disciplined. We sell fine arts and do branding with amazing artists in the U.S. and the Caribbean.

Norma Krieger / CAROL DRONSFIELD

But then you relocated to New York?
Yes. I relaunched it in New York. Saint Croix just wasn't a good fit for the company.

Are you happy?
I'm extremely happy. My company provides a lot of opportunities for me to experience and learn myself. For instance, I recently worked as an assistant producer on a documentary film with one of my filmmakers. I also recently self-published a few books. I've even explored acting.

Lennon 'Paperback Writer' guitar tops offerings

A Gretsch guitar that John Lennon played for the recording of the Beatles' hit song "Paperback Writer" and then gave to his cousin is expected to fetch up to $1 million at auction in Britain this week.

Auction house Tracks Auction.com said the Gretsch 6120 instrument was one of the most significant Lennon guitars to come on the market in the last 30 years.

"It's come directly from John Lennon's cousin, who was given it by John Lennon in 1967, and he's had it ever since, so for collectors of Beatles memorabilia to have a provenance like that is exceptional," the auction house said.

Obama pressures FCC for strong neutrality rules

President Barack Obama on Monday pressured the federal communications regulator to toughen its planned rules, saying higher-fee "fast lanes" should be banned and Internet providers should be overseen more like public utilities are.

Obama's detailed position on the issue of "net neutrality," a platform in his presidential campaign in 2008, represented a rare step by the White House into the policy-setting of an independent agency.

It came after nearly 4 million comments flooded the Federal Communications Commission after Chairman Tom Wheeler formally proposed new Internet traffic rules in May.

Shares of major cable companies, which connect many Americans to the Internet, slid on the news. REUTERS

Apple devices vulnerable to attack, says researchers

FireEye advises iOS users to refrain from installing apps from sources other than Apple's official App Store and to not click "install" on a pop-up from a third-party Web page. / GETTY IMAGES

Cyber security. Hackers can use these bugs to steal banking and email login credentials from most devices.

Cybersecurity researchers have warned that a bug in Apple Inc's iOS operating system makes most iPhones and iPads vulnerable to cyber attacks by hackers seeking access to sensitive data and control of their devices.

Cybersecurity firm FireEye Inc. published details about the vulnerability on its blog Monday, saying the bug enables hackers to access their devices by persuading users to install malicious applications with tainted text messages, emails and Web links.

The malicious application can then be used to replace genuine, trusted apps that were installed through Apple's App Store, including email and banking programs, with malicious software through a technique that FireEye has dubbed "Masque Attack."

Apple officials could not be reached for comment.

Wei said that FireEye disclosed the vulnerability to Apple in July and that representatives with the company have said they were working to fix the bug.

News of the vulnerability began to leak out in October on specialized Web forums where security experts and hackers alike discuss information on Apple bugs, Wei said.

Wei said that FireEye decided to go public with its findings after Palo Alto Networks Inc. last week uncovered the first campaign to exploit the vulnerability, a new family of malicious software known as WireLurker that infects both Mac computers and iOS.

"Currently WireLurker is the only one, but we will see more," Wei said. REUTERS

Operating systems

The security firm said it verified this vulnerability on:

iOS 7.1.1, 7.1.2, 8.0, 8.1 and 8.1.1 beta, for both jailbroken and non-jailbroken devices.

Money trail. Veterans sue banks, claim they should pay for attacks

A man kneels at the headstone in Section 60 of Arlington National Cemetery in Arlington, Virginia. / GETTY IMAGES

Wounded U.S. veterans and family members of U.S. soldiers killed in Iraq sued five European banks on Monday, seeking to hold them responsible for shootings and roadside bombings because they allegedly processed Iranian money that paid for the attacks.

The lawsuit filed in U.S. District Court in Brooklyn, New York, named Barclays Plc., Credit Suisse Group AG, HSBC Holdings Plc., Standard Chartered and Royal Bank of Scotland Group Plc.

The banks did not immediately respond to requests for comment.

The lawsuit was brought under the U.S. Anti-Terrorism Act, a 1992 law that permits victims to bring private suits against alleged financiers of militant operations.

The militant groups included a Shi'ite militia in Iraq, Kataib Hezbollah, as well as Quds Force, the overseas arm of Iran's Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps, according to the lawsuit.

Since 2009, the five banks have agreed to pay about $3.2 billion to the U.S. government to resolve allegations that they handled money in violation of sanctions against nations such as Iran, Libya and Cuba. All the banks signed deferred prosecution agreements with the U.S. Justice Department in addition to settlements with U.S. banking regulators.

In a statement issued after its 2012 agreement with U.S. prosecutors and banking regulators, HSBC said it accepted responsibility for "past mistakes." Standard Chartered, which also reached an agreement in 2012, emphasized that it was cooperating with U.S. authorities.

The agreements did not allege a link between the transactions, which the U.S. government viewed as unlawful, and militant operations. REUTERS

Veterans and family

Brought on behalf of more than 200 veterans and family members, the lawsuit alleges the banks conspired with Iranian banks to mask wire transactions in order to evade U.S. sanctions.

$100M

The Iranian banks then funneled more than $100 million to militant groups that operated in Iraq at Iran's direction, according to the suit.

Unhappy bankers

Some bankers have expressed resentment at the long reach of U.S. policies.

- In a 2006 email quoted in the complaint filed on Monday, a Standard Chartered manager told a colleague, "Who are you to tell us, the rest of the world, that we're not going to deal with Iranians?"

US releases low 2015 Obamacare enrollment forecast

The U.S. administration on Monday dramatically cut expectations for 2015 Obamacare enrollment, saying between 9 million and 9.9 million people will enroll in private health plans, compared with a Congressional Budget Office forecast of 13 million.

An Obama administration report, released just before the start of 2015 open enrollment on Saturday, also reduced the official count of 2014 enrollment to 7.1 million people as of Oct. 15, from 7.3 million in August.

CBO, which has been a leading enrollment forecaster for Obamacare up to now, predicted that the private insurance marketplaces set up by the Affordable Care Act, better known as "Obamacare," would reach a mature 25 million paying customers by 2017.

But Monday's first-of-its-kind prediction by the Obama administration assumes that the marketplaces could take two years longer to mature. REUTERS

Ebola watch. Doctor isolated in N. Carolina after trip to Liberia

A missionary doctor deemed to be at 'some risk' for developing Ebola after returning from Liberia has been placed under a 21-day quarantine in North Carolina, his mission group and local health officials said on Monday.

Dr. John Fankhauser, 52, has shown no signs of the virus since arriving in Charlotte over the weekend but will be monitored for symptoms during the quarantine period ordered by the Mecklenburg County Health Department, Christian mission group SIM USA said.

This is the second quarantine the family physician from Ventura, California, will spend on SIM's campus in Charlotte, the group said.

In mid-August, he was isolated after returning to the United States from Liberia, where he treated Ebola patients, including two U.S. missionaries who became infected with the disease.

SIM said Fankhauser volunteered to go back to Liberia after another colleague, SIM missionary Dr. Rick Sacra, became ill with the virus. Fankhauser helped treat Sacra and then took over his duties at SIM's hospital outside of Monrovia after Sacra was evacuated to the United States for treatment, the group said. REUTERS

Snow falls on northern US, cold sweeping south

Conditions. Police in Minnesota reported dozens of car crashes as drivers struggled with slippery roads.

An arctic blast began to dump heavy snow in parts of the northern Rockies, Plains and the Great Lakes regions on Monday and meteorologists said temperatures are expected to plummet throughout the United States.

The National Weather Service has issued winter storm warnings and watches for a wide swath of the northern U.S. from northern Idaho to northern Michigan with predictions of more than a foot of snow in many areas and temperatures dipping 20 to 30 degrees below normal for this time of year.

The storm is expected to hamper travel by closing roads with heavy snow and winds and causing power outages, according to the National Weather Service.

Sgt. Jesse Grabow from Minnesota State Patrol said a semi trailer hauling turkeys overturned on Interstate 94 Eastbound near Dalton, Minnesota, early Monday morning. The driver was uninjured but there were some turkey fatalities, he said.

Twin Cities crashes

In the Twin Cities metro area, there were 128 crashes, nine with injuries and 74 vehicles spun off the road, according to the Minnesota State Patrol.

A cold front associated with the storm will dump rain on the lower Great Lakes, Ohio Valley and as far south as the western Gulf Coast on Tuesday, the National Weather Service said.

The last time a storm of this magnitude hit the region this early in the winter season was around Halloween of 1991, said Andy Lahr, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service. REUTERS

3 Big life mistakes many people make

TRADE LIKE A MILLIONAIRE

TIMOTHY SYKES

TIMOTHYSYKES.COM

Timothy Sykes is a millionaire stock trader and entrepreneur.

I've been fortunate enough to become successful at a young age, and now I have several millionaire students, too. Out of my more than 5,000 students, I see the same mistakes being made over and over, so it's time to break the cycle.

For exclusive commentary, visit Metro.us/blogs.

No. 1: Being afraid to take action

We are all given life-changing opportunities, but many people don't take action because they're afraid of the consequences. Even if they haven't achieved many or even any of their goals, they prefer the status quo rather than risking a big change from which there would be no going back. My millionaire students were ordinary middle-class people before me, but with dedication and hard work they truly transformed their lives.

No. 2: Staying isolated

Too many people never leave their city or town because they think they have everything they need right around them. Get out and expand your horizons. You will be amazed and awe-inspired by the outside world. As technology has improved, costs have come down and the ease of travel is at an all-time high, so take advantage.

No. 3: Focusing on money

It might sound strange for me to say this, but it's a mistake to focus only on money. Yes, I am a self-made multimillionaire and my proudest achievement is creating millionaire students, but because I'm a stock trader, money is simply how I keep score of how well I do in my profession — it's not the goal of my life.

Don't focus solely on money. Focus on acquiring enough knowledge and skills to be able to make money as a result of your talents. Money is nice, but self-confidence and self-sufficiency are better.

What Sykes is into this week

1 The U.S. stock markets have broken out to new highs after a much-needed volatile October; sometimes consolidation is healthy.

2 Two Americans were released from detention in North Korea; I'm ecstatic for their friends and families.

3 As we get closer to the end of college football season, I'm excited for the new playoff to finally decide the national champions fairly.

*For the Apple Bank BONUS Savings account, interest earned on daily balances of $2,500 or more at these tiers: $2,500-$24,999: .10% Annual Percentage Yield (APY), $25,000 and up: .75% APY. There is no interest paid on balances of $0-$2,499. APYs disclosed effective as of July 1, 2014. APYs may be changed at any time at the Bank's discretion. There is a minimum of $2,500 required to open the Apple Bank BONUS Savings account. $2,500 minimum daily balance is required to avoid $10 monthly maintenance fee. Fees may reduce earnings. Funds used to open this account cannot be from an existing Apple Bank account. Maximum deposit amount is $1,000,000 per household. *Special bonus feature: A .25% simple interest rate bonus will be paid on each anniversary date of account opening on the lowest balance for that year (anniversary date to anniversary date). No bonus is paid if the account balance is less than $2,500 on the anniversary date. Additional deposits during a given anniversary period do not affect the bonus interest payment. Deposits made to the account on any anniversary date will be used to calculate the lowest account balance for the next anniversary period. The bonus interest is calculated on the lowest balance on deposit from one anniversary date to the next anniversary date. Simple interest rate bonus is subject to change at any time after first anniversary date of account opening. Hypothetical example of how bonus works: Assume an account is opened on July 1, 2014 for $50,000. A $10,000 withdrawal is made on February 15, 2015. No other withdrawals are made prior to the July 1, 2015 anniversary date. The low balance is now $40,000, so $100 in bonus interest will be paid on July 1, 2015.

New twist in the weird feud between Martha Stewart and Goop

I guess in the world of domestic divas, the enemy of your enemy is your friend? Or something? At least that's what seems to be happening now that Martha Stewart is being all warm and cozy with Blake Lively, seemingly giving her stamp of approval to Lively's Preserve. As long as it's a threat to Gwyneth Paltrow's Goop, I guess it's fine by Stewart. The classiest ex-con in Connecticut put any previous differences aside when she introduced the former "Gossip Girl" star as her "friend" at her recent American Made Summit. That might have had something to do with the fact that Lively would totally let husband Ryan Reynolds tap that, as it were. "When we met Martha, she was like, 'I'll ride motorcycles with you, Ryan,'" Lively told the crowd at the Summit. "That's the only woman that can creep up on my man and I would be OK with it." See? The power structure is preserved.

Not even $800 million can get Robert Plant interested in a Led Zeppelin reunion?

Been a long time since they rock 'n' rolled — and apparently, if you're waiting to hear these guys rock 'n' roll again, it will be a long, lonely, lonely, lonely, lonely, lonely time. / REDFERNS

Robert Plant has taken pains to say he isn't interested in another Led Zeppelin reunion, but yesterday morning a rumor circulated that made him seem severely uninterested. The Daily Mirror reported that Plant tore up a contract offered by Richard Branson worth nearly $800 million that would have brought the classic rock titans back for 35 shows in London, Berlin and somewhere in New Jersey. The other members were each reportedly offered somewhere closer to $200 million. Plant's publicist reportedly emailed The Guardian later in the afternoon and called the $800 million number "rubbish." He did not, however, offer any new hope for an actual Zeppelin reunion.

Nick Jonas has likely shed the promise ring

Nick Jonas is working hard to distance himself from his former Disney-controlled Jonas Brothers image, doing everything from giving crotch-grabbing demos to covering Sam Smith songs in tiny clubs in L.A. to posting as many shirtless selfies as he can. Oh, and talking about sex. A lot. In the latest issue of British gay magazine Attitude, he offers this: "Sex is such an important part of a healthy life, in the sense that it's an intrinsic part of who you are. When your sex life is not healthy, you resort to other things as an outlet."

Gabrielle Union says nude photo leak is more than 'a hacking scandal'

Now that she's had some time to think about it, Gabrielle Union is speaking out about the nude photo leak from two months ago perpetrated against her along with a slew of famous women like Jennifer Lawrence. "I didn't do anything wrong. No matter what people describe to me, 'It's your fault, you're stupid to take nude photos, that's what happens when you're a celebrity' — all this nonsense. ... They're criminals," she told the crowd at the recent Fun Fearless Life event in NYC. (Union also penned an editorial about it for the December issue of Cosmopolitan.)

GETTY IMAGES

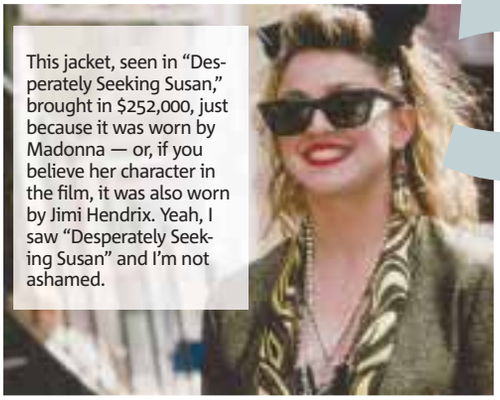
"What you do with your own body is your choice. Period. There's no gray matter there. And when someone takes your choice away and your power away over your own body, it's a crime. Period. A hacking scandal? We're lessening it, making it more palatable for mass consumption, but it's a crime."

Some fans desperately seeking Madonna



This jacket, seen in "Desperately Seeking Susan," brought in $252,000, just because it was worn by Madonna — or, if you believe her character in the film, it was also worn by Jimi Hendrix. Yeah, I saw "Desperately Seeking Susan" and I'm not ashamed.

ORION PICTURES

Somebody just paid a whole lot of money for the ability to do some really authentic Madonna cosplay. At the recent Icons & Idols: Rock n' Roll charity auction in Beverly Hills, a collection of clothes from the Material Girl's back catalog brought in some impressive bids. Here are some of the highlights:

- Dress from wedding to Sean Penn: $81,250
- Gown and stole from "Material Girl" video: $73,125
- "A League of Their Own" baseball uniform: $31,250
- Gown from "Evita": $15,000

'Navy SEALs: Their Untold Story'

Today is Veterans Day, and if you're reading this, there's a good chance you're commuting to work and not honoring our vets by taking a day off. If that's the case, honor the special-ops force that began during World War II with this two-hour doc that features previously unseen footage and home movies as well as interviews with former SEALs, one of whom was a D-Day demolition team member. 9 P.M., PBS

COMEDY

'The Mindy Project'

Mindy has a certain notion about taking somebody else's stuff, but her boyfriend's mom (played awesomely by guest star Rhea Perlman, best known from "Cheers") has a little shoplifting habit that changes Mindy's mind. Then in another arc, after Peter was a jerk at their blind date, and then totally fell for her after reading her book, he comes to have second (or third) thoughts about Abby (also played awesomely, but this time by guest star Allison Tolman from "Fargo").

REALITY

'Dogs of War'

Another program that coincides nicely with Veterans Day, this new series on A&E seems to be aiming to do for PTSD what "Intervention" did for drug addiction: Bring attention to a very serious issue by profiling real people suffering from it. This one involves a man named Michael who is plagued by night terrors. Another component of this program that lends itself to a little bit more feel-good possibility than "Intervention" is that the vets are paired with service dogs (that's where they get the title for this show, obviously) as they undergo rehabilitation.

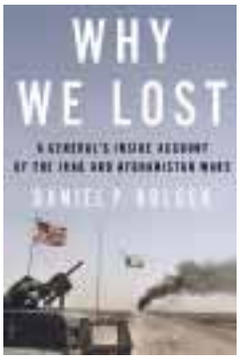
Veterans Day. These two very different military books both deserve your attention

Writing about something as controversial as war is tricky, but two service members of the U.S. military get it right in these new releases, out now.

DANIEL BOLGER SERVED IN THE MILITARY FOR 35 YEARS. / PROVIDED

HOWARD WASDIN WAS A NAVY SEAL SNIPER. / PROVIDED

'Why We Lost: A General's Inside Account of the Iraq and Afghanistan Wars'



By Daniel P. Bolger

U.S. Army Lieutenant General Daniel P. Bolger's 35-year military career has made him privy to meetings with the most important military decision-makers in the country, as well as key figures on the civilian side. He was present in meetings when big strategy decisions regarding the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan were made, and he reveals exactly what went down behind closed doors.

Bolger isn't afraid to speak his mind about mistakes that have been made by himself and other key players in the U.S. military, but he's just as quick to commend the things the troops and their leaders have done right.

'The Last Rescue: How Faith and Love Saved a Navy SEAL Sniper'

By Howard Wasdin

This memoir is about war, love and redemption. Navy SEAL sniper Howard Wasdin was fortunate enough to survive the firestorm made famous in "Black Hawk Down," but his return home to reality was a harsh one.

"The Last Rescue" is about his tough transition to life after deployment, where he is not only forced to grapple with severe injuries and a long road back to recovery, but also to face the fact that his marriage is failing.

Wasdin's hardships make him question his faith in God and purpose in life. He tells a powerful story of searching for faith and hope, while encountering a new, unexpected romance.

Q&A
DAMON WAYANS JR. JUST WANTS TO DRAW

The "Big Hero 6" vocal star talks about playing a neurotic superhero, the heart of "New Girl" and, of course, gynecologists.

On the brilliant-but-canceled "Happy Endings," Damon Wayans Jr. proved he's a master of the high-pitched squeal. So it shouldn't have come as a surprise to him that for "Big Hero 6," Disney wanted his character, Wasabi, to sound not all that manly. We caught up with Wayans to talk about the animated film, plus his current work on "New Girl" — and how if everyone followed their childhood dreams, we'd have a world full of ninjas, superheroes and disappointed gynecologists.

Did you feel at all slighted when you realized the voice they wanted from you was not exactly a big tough guy?
The first time I saw Wasabi's character, I saw him in his superhero mode, with his green visor and his plasma blades poking out, so I was just like, "Oh, this guy is badass." And they were like, "Yeah, we want him to be … a little neurotic, more of a worrywart." And I was like, "Is that how you see me?" [Laughs] No, I didn't really feel slighted. It was one of those things where it's like, "Whatever you want." Because growing up, I wanted to be an animator and an illustrator, so I always looked up to Disney.

What stopped you from pursuing illustration?
I don't know. I mean, I still draw constantly. I'm actually developing a graphic novel right now. But I don't know. Nobody's ever their first dream — I mean, rarely. There would be so many ninjas and superheroes now if everybody was their first dream. I remember growing up, being at sixth grade graduation and like half my class wanted to be gynecologists. I was like, "Why do you guys want to look at sick vaginas, dude?" They probably thought in their head it was so noble. No, it's a hard job.

Or they had just learned what a gynecologist was.
Yeah, they were like, "You get to look at vaginas?" No, dude. You get to look at vaginas at their worst. [Laughs] You'd just wind up saying, "Oh, this isn't right."

Something 'New'

How is "New Girl" going?
They give you a lot of freedom. They don't necessarily use all of [the ad libs], but you definitely are allowed to express yourself and be funny. It's always fun to make the crew laugh as well, or to make one of the characters break within the scene, I love that. I just love destroying a take. Like, we have to go from the top because I said something that was funny. I mean, I know toward the end of the day you just want to get through it because everyone's tired, so I'll hold back then. But early in the morning I'm like, "Why not?"

How does the "New Girl" experience compare to "Happy Endings"?
I feel like "Happy Endings," we never had the luxury of comfort. We never felt like we were just going to be here for years, so we were always eager to give our best. When you're on "New Girl" and you know it's going to be here for a couple more years, you're a little more relaxed. I also feel like the one thing that "New Girl" has that "Happy Endings" didn't — which I feel like they needed more of — is heart. I feel like "New Girl," no matter how crazy they get, they'll have at least one or two scenes where they just ground the hell out of it and it's like, this is why the show stays on the air, because people need to make that connection. I feel like "Happy Endings" was more of coastal show, appeal-wise.

Frederick Wiseman goes to the museum

One scene in Frederick Wiseman's (inset) "National Gallery," now showing at Film Forum, portrays a dance that happens in the gallery.

ALL PHOTOS BY ZIPPORAH FILMS

"National Gallery" is the 41st movie that filmmaker Frederick Wiseman, a spry 84, has made in his 47-year career, and in a sense it's more of the same: Like "Titicut Follies," "La Danse," "Crazy Horse" and more, it's a purely observational exploration of an institution, with no narration or music. Filmed in London's titular hot spot over three months, it is, at three hours, one of his longest.

You are famous for staying unobtrusive. How often do people look in the camera?

It's never a problem. People don't look at the camera. And the worst thing you can do is say, "Please forget about us, don't look in the camera," because that's when someone will look in the camera. I try to demystify the process. Someone will say, "Is that a camera?" or "Is that a tape recorder?" I'll say, "Yeah, would you like to see how it works?" So you put the camera on their shoulder and let them look through the eyepiece, or put the headphones on and hold the mic up and let them talk so they can hear their voices. That happens occasionally, but not often.

Your earliest films tended to focus on bureaucratic incompetence. Films like this and "At Berkeley" are far more hopeful.

Not everything is bad. Seeing good people doing good things and useful things and complex things well is just as good a subject as showing a horrible prison where people are abused. I don't think it represents any evolution in my thinking so much as a wish to display as wide a variety of human experiences as possible.

Praise

Errol on Frederick

There's an essay about you by Errol Morris in which he calls you "the undisputed king of misanthropic cinema."

It's very funny. But that's an example of pure projection. Because if there's any king of misanthropic cinema, it's him.

5 Ways to save money on holiday travel

Deals. Johnny Jet shares his top tips so you can visit the family — and still have cash left for gifts.

DiScala typically travels around 150,000 miles a year, visiting 20 countries in the process. Here he is in India. / PROVIDED

Travel expert John E. DiScala, better known as Johnny Jet, gets flown around the world by hotels, airlines and destinations hoping to get his nod of approval on JohnnyJet.com (and, a couple of years ago, his Travel Channel show "Hot Spots 2012"). Sir Richard Branson even gave him a personal tour of his island and spaceship. It's not a bad gig, and one that has let DiScala amass a ton of useful travel knowledge, from how to fit your life into a carry on to the best travel apps.

We caught up with DiScala and picked his brain about how to save money on Thanksgiving and Christmas trips.

Wait for dead week

1 What's the very best way to save money on holiday travel? Don't go.

"The week after Thanksgiving and two weeks after New Year's are 'dead weeks,'" DiScala says. "No one is traveling and everything is on sale. You'll find deals half the price of what flights are going for over the holidays. If you can wait, wait."

Choose your day and time wisely

2 When waiting isn't an option, "the No. 1 trick is to be flexible," says DiScala. "Take Thanksgiving: You're not going to find a deal for traveling Wednesday to Sunday — the airline has no incentive because that's when everyone wants to go."

Instead, "use your vacation days wisely" and extend the holiday, he says: Fly on the Monday or Tuesday before Turkey Day and return on the Tuesday or Wednesday after. Or, make it a mini-trip by flying out Christmas morning and returning the next day.

Once you pick your day, don't search for a specific time frame. Be flexible on flying early in the morning or very late at night. "If you're going to save a few hundred dollars [a ticket], for a family of four, it's worth it," he says.

Heading to Chicago? Don't look only at flights to O'Hare Airport. It might be cheaper to fly into Midway, or even to Milwaukee's Mitchell International. / PURESTOCK

Consider alternate airports

3 Sure, it's easier to fly out of the closest airport — but you may be able to save big by hopping a bus or getting a friend to drive you to one that's farther away. The same goes for where you land.

Heading to Miami? Check prices for the Fort Lauderdale Airport, just 25 miles away. Alternate Airports.com has a list of nearby options to major U.S. airports.

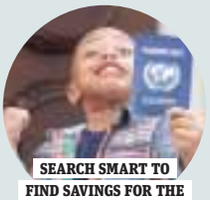
Advice



SEARCH SMART TO FIND SAVINGS FOR THE WHOLE FAMILY. ALEXIS VAIL

Don't bundle bookings

4 "Sometimes only a certain amount of bargain fares are loaded into the system," DiScala explains. "If you're a family of four and there are only three fares left at the bargain price, and you search for four people, all four will get the higher price."

So first search fares for one person. Then search for four and compare the two — if the second result isn't the first fare multiplied by four, try searching three people. The goal is to get the max number of family members the cheapest fare.

PLUS

Tip No. 5

Keep on searchin'

There isn't a magic website for finding the guaranteed best deal. "If there was, that would be a trillion-dollar company," DiScala says.

Check all the travel search engines, like Travelocity and Kayak, and sign up for fare alerts. Go directly to airlines' sites to see what they offer. Always look at Southwest separately — the airline doesn't show up on the search sites.

How to manage adult 'Mean Girls' like a pro

Playing nice. Author Emily Liebert dishes on the ups and downs of suburban motherhood.

A playgroup is just as much about you as it is about your kids. / PHOTODISC

Imagine constantly having to listen to catty comments, vicious gossip and thinly veiled insults every time you leave the house. While it may sound like a typical day in high school, it's also what many moms have to endure as they shuffle their children between school and various social activities. In the new novel "When We Fall," Emily Liebert details the trials and tribulations of Allison Parker, a 30-something mom who moves back to her ritzy hometown while grieving the loss of her husband. We asked Liebert for her tips on navigating the often-treacherous waters of suburbia.

Master the art of small talk

"I'm a very outgoing person," says Liebert. "And really the way you meet people is through your kid and saying things like 'What classes is he taking?'" she says. It's also perfectly fine to gravitate toward people you naturally have things in common with. "For me, I relate more to moms who have careers and are also balancing raising kids," she notes. "We sort of have the same struggles and things we've got to balance out."

Avoid bragging contests

One of the hardest parts about living in a town filled with investment bankers and CEOs is constantly dealing with money talk. "I change the topic," says Liebert. "In any suburb of New York, people feel the need to let you know how much money they have. It's like they'll say, 'Oh, I can't go to that play date because my Mercedes sl550 [needs a tune-up], and you just say, 'Oh, OK.'"

It's not too late

You can always get a second chance

When Liebert's main character Allison moves back to her hometown, she's at a turning point in her life and is wondering if she's ready to love again. "I am a firm, firm believer in second chances — and third chances," says Liebert. "There's no clear definition of a path you should follow."

Just because your kids are friends doesn't mean you have to be

It's human nature that you simply aren't going to click with everyone. If you don't like a certain mom, Liebert advises sending your babysitter to the play dates in your place. "I have friends who are moms and it's understood that it's as much a play date for us as it is for our kids," she says.

Rise above the gossip

Gossip in tight-knit communities spreads quickly and it can be very painful to be at the center of rumors. "It's not pleasant to maintain your character," says Liebert. "But I think that if I only had my husband, my kids and my family, and two or three very close friends, that's really all I need."

American people always lose the election

As an Independent voter with absolutely no party affiliation, every election year feels like a "loss" to me. Between the media, party rhetoric, campaigners claiming their party "won" each election, it shows exactly what's wrong with our political system and why the country isn't improving. Having your party "win" more seats has become more important than resolving issues. Controlling the House, Senate or Governor's Mansion is the priority over working together to put cities, states and the country back on the right track. The fact both parties take pride in winning the annual popularity contest with empty promises they know they will never keep, as opposed to getting past partisanship, is why every election feels the same to voters who don't believe in either party. Whether it's at the city, state or federal level, success in politics is now measured by who has the most party members, as opposed to how their actions improve the lives of the people they represent. Doesn't matter to me who "wins" each year, because in all the years I have voted, it always feels like a loss.

Bad news

Palmer out for season

The MRI results Monday were hardly a surprise after Sunday's speculation, but Arizona quarterback Carson Palmer is out for the season with a torn left ACL. Palmer tore the same ACL, and MCL, in 2006. The Cardinals have the best record in the NFL at 8-1 and Palmer just signed a three-year extension.

Mets sign Cuddyer in first big move

The free agency period began just last week, and the Mets — strangely enough — are the first team to make a significant move.

New York signed veteran outfielder Michael Cuddyer to a two-year deal, the team announced Monday. ESPN reports the deal is worth $21 million total, with $8.5 million coming in 2015 and $12.5 million in 2016.

Cuddyer, 35, hit .332 with 10 home runs and 31 RBIs in 49 games last season. He was on the disabled list three times, however. And those numbers came in the friendly confines of Coors Field in Colorado.

The Mets will surrender their No. 15 pick to sign Cuddyer, who is a Type A free agent. The team was reluctant to sign Michael Bourn before the 2013 season, because only top 10 picks are protected and they owned the No. 11 spot. METRO

DeGrom takes NL Rookie of the Year

MLB. The starter took top rookie honors Monday, joining four other Mets to win the league award.

Jacob deGrom long ago captured the attention of New York City. He capitalized on that nationally Monday when he was named the NL Rookie of the Year.

The 26-year-old unexpectedly emerged as the Mets' top starter this season, let alone their top rookie. A handful of top prospects, including Zack Wheeler, Noah Syndergaard and Rafael Montero were expected to emerge, but deGrom did instead. DeGrom wasn't even one of the team's top-10 prospects entering 2014, according to Baseball America.

"It's a real honor," deGrom told MLB Network after being named the winner. "I'm real thankful."

He beat out Reds center fielder Billy Hamilton and Cardinals second baseman Kolten Wong for the award.

DeGrom more or less ran away with the award. He received 142 points total and 26-of-30 first-place votes. Hamilton received the other four first-place votes.

Visit Metro.us to read about AL Rookie of the Year Jose Abreu.

DeGrom becomes the first Mets player to win the award since Dwight Gooden in 1984, and the fifth all time, joining Tom Seaver (1967), Jon Matlack (1972) and Darryl Strawberry (1983).

DeGrom finished the season with a 9-6 record and 2.69 ERA in 22 starts. He struck out 144 batters in 140 1/3 innings.

The right-hander ended the season in style. DeGrom lowered his ERA in each of his final six starts and had 23 strikeouts in his final two starts, including an MLB-record eight strikeouts to start a game in his second-to-last outing.

"Even coming into this year, I didn't really know what to expect," said deGrom, who was in Single-A in 2013. "I came up in the bullpen and got the opportunity to start, and I just wanted to make the most of it."

Yankees reliever Dellin Betances was a finalist for the AL Rookie of the Year award, but White Sox slugger Jose Abreu was the landslide winner, receiving all 30 first-place votes.

MLB. Robertson declines offer from Yankees, enters free agency

The Yankees may be looking for a new closer for the second straight season.

The team announced Monday afternoon David Robertson declined a $15.3 million qualifying offer and will become a free agent.

The Yankees could still re-sign Robertson, but he should draw quite a bit of interest on the open market. The Yankees also have Dellin Betances to fall back on as a closer.

Robertson was very successful in his first year season taking over for Mariano Rivera. He finished with 39 saves in 44 opportunities and had a 3.08 ERA. He struck out 96 batters in 64 1/3 innings.

Robertson is unlikely to receive more than $15.3 million annually from another team, but he could get the security of a longer-term deal for more total money. The Nationals' Rafael Soriano was the highest-paid reliever in baseball in 2014 at $15 million. Betances, 26, had a 1.40 ERA in his first full season in the majors. METRO

NBA power rankings | by James Toscano

No. 1

Warriors (5-1)

Are the Warriors legit? You bet. Stephen Curry and Klay Thompson will continue to splash shots from all over and a healthy Andrew Bogut could be the difference-maker this season.

No. 2

Clippers (4-2)

Doc Rivers ripped his team after their embarrassing loss to the Warriors. They responded by beating Portland.

No. 3

Rockets (6-1)

The absence of Dwight Howard (flu) really showed his value to the Rockets as they also lost to Golden State.

No. 4

Raptors (6-1)

All of this good basketball may keep Drake out of the studio. I'll let you decide if that's a good thing or not.

No. 5

Spurs (2-3)

Gregg Popovich isn't putting much stock into these regular-season games, resting his veterans already.

No. 6

Heat (5-2)

No LeBron? No problem. Well, let's not go that far. But the Heat are East contenders with Chris Bosh in the driver's seat.

No. 7

Grizzlies (6-1)

A bit of a surprise out of the gates. It's due to their gritty defense as they're allowing just 87.6 points per game.

No. 8

Cavaliers (2-3)

In the words of LeBron, who quoted Aaron Rodgers: "Relax." The problem? LeBron created all the hysteria to begin with!

No. 9

Blazers (4-3)

They own one of the best starting lineups around. No wonder four of their five starters average at least 33 minutes per game.

No. 10

Bulls (5-2)

The Derrick Rose-less Bulls lost to the Rajon Rondo-less Celtics at home, but we can't put too much stock into that one.

No. 11

Wizards (5-2)

After being smoked by the Raptors last Friday, the Wizards haven't beaten a good team yet this season.

No. 12

Mavericks (4-3)

Early on, Dallas finds itself in the same spot it was for the majority of last season — teetering on the edge of playoff contention.

No. 13

Suns (4-3)

Whether it's the plethora of guards they trot out or the Morris brothers (Markieff and Marcus), the Suns are a fun team.

No. 14

Kings (5-2)

DeMarcus Cousins is averaging 23 and 11, but nothing says "it's only November" like the Kings starting off 5-2.

No. 15

Nets (4-2)

Brook Lopez has returned, but Lionel Hollins has already removed him from a game due to his lack of defensive effort.

No. 16

Hornets (3-4)

There is no excuse for being the first team to lose to the Lakers. Al Jefferson is averaging just 7.3 rebounds per game.

No. 17

Pelicans (3-2)

Anthony Davis is just putting up ridiculous stat lines to start this season. He's averaging 4.4 blocks to go with 24.4 points per game.

No. 18

Hawks (2-3)

No player is hitting more 3-pointers right now than Kyle Korver at 3.8 per game. In fact, he just hit another one as you read this.

Ryan: Jarrett earned start, not about Pryor

Jarrett skies for his second interception of the game Sunday. He also had a sack and a fumble recovery. / GETTY IMAGES

Despite a breakout game, head coach Rex Ryan had to defend starting Jaiquawn Jarrett at safety on Monday after reports surfaced rookie Calvin Pryor had been late to team meetings, necessitating punishment.

Ryan painted the decision to sit Pryor as one made on Jarrett's recent play in practice and nothing to do with the missed meeting in his Monday conference call.

"Jaiquawn Jarrett is the reason why Calvin didn't start. Jaiquawn Jarrett has done a tremendous job, and even on Sundays prior to this, he has done a good job for us," Ryan said. "So you can judge it, look at the tape yourself and all that and do the right thing, and play guys that earn it, or you can ignore it."

To date, Pryor has struggled in being beaten over the top and still doesn't appear comfortable playing in space.

"I think it's going to be hard to keep [Jarrett] out of that starting lineup," Ryan said. "After the performance he had, I'm sure he'll probably be, if not, he should be, the [AFC] Defensive Player of the Week." KRISTIAN DYER
